WASHINGTON NEWS
IN A LINE OR TWOCONSIDERABLE DOUBT ABOUT ADJOURNMENT.

Notwithstanding the Unanimous Resolution to Quit May 18, It Begins to Look More Like June—May Break the Record of Half a Century.

Washington, May 11.—Although the house of representatives has passed by unanimous vote a concurrent resolution to adjourn this session of congress on May 18, and although the general hope is that an early adjournment will be effected, still, the date is a matter of doubt and uncertainty in the minds of many congressmen.

Even if the session should close by the end of the first week in June the record for more than half a century would be broken. Not since 1830 has the "long session" of any congress closed short of 187 days, which would carry the present session to Saturday, June 6.

All other "long sessions" have exceeded 200 days, ranging from 202 days in 1859-60, 204 days in 1873-74, 209 days in 1863-64, and 218 days in 1883-84, the last having closed July 7, 1884, and thence upward to the longest session on record—the first session of the Fiftieth congress—which continued until Oct. 20, 1888, having been in continuous session 321 days.

That was the session in which the democratic house of representatives passed the Mills tariff bill, and the republican senate passed as a substitute what was known as the Aldrich-Allison-Sherman tariff, which constituted the framework of the McKinley tariff law of 1890.

Even if the present session shall continue ten working days in the month of June, the adjournment would be made Thursday, June 11—a total of 191 days—and then all would have time to reach St. Louis in good season before the opening of the convention on Tuesday, June 16.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN IN CONGRESS
Cuban Crisis Likely to Occupy Some Attention This Week.

Washington, May 11.—The consideration of the river and harbor appropriation bill will probably be concluded. This will be followed by the resolution to seat Mr. Dupont. The bill making appropriations for the District of Columbia will next be considered.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, May 11.—The celebration of the anniversary of the signing of the treaty Sunday was attended by splendid weather. Emperor William and Empress Augusta arrived in the city at 10 o'clock in the morning and received a greeting from a great multitude of people who had gathered to welcome them. The city was magnificently decorated, gay colored bunting and elaborate designs of flowers and green being everywhere manifest. Crowds of people had gathered into the city from outlying districts and deputations were also present from all the universities of central and southern Germany. After the official reception had been concluded their majesties, with a numerous suite, attended a thanksgiving service at St. Catherine Church. Dr. Miquel, Prussian minister of finance, was present at this service. After the service at the church the emperor with great ceremony unveiled a monument to his grandfather, Emperor William I. The burgomaster of Frankfort in a dedicatory speech hailed William I. as "the unselfish hero emperor."

Senators Berry, Vest and Perkins will oppose the San Monica amendment, and Senator Frye, as chairman of the committee on commerce, will explain the committee's reason for its action. Senator White will reply briefly to Mr. Frye. After this it is expected that the vote on the amendment will be taken, and that whatever the fate of this amendment the bill will be promptly passed. It is not expected to remain long in conference, as there is a disposition manifest in both houses to get the bill to the president as early as practicable.

This is due to the fear of a veto and to the determination to remain in session long enough to give congress time to act in case of such adverse endorsement by the president.

The agreement in regard to the DuPont case is that it shall be taken up for debate immediately after the disposal of the river and harbor bill, and that a vote shall be taken not later than 5 o'clock of the second day after the debate begins.

It is doubtful whether the entire time allowed for debate will be required. The result of the vote is still in doubt. It depends upon one or two populist senators who have not made their position known so far as ascertained.

There are several features in the district bill which are expected to arouse debate, but if it should be passed before the close of the week the committee on appropriations will have the fortification appropriation bill ready to take up and will press its consideration. There will, however, be strong pressure in that event to work on the calendar.

The indications are that the house will be occupied with conference reports on appropriation bills. Tuesday is District of Columbia day, and Wednesday is pre-empted of the special order giving it up to the consideration of private pension bills. It is likely that the contested election cases of Rinker vs. Downing and Murray vs. Elliott will with such conference reports as are presented occupy the remainder of the time. It is not improbable that a resolution regarding the protection of the two Americans sentenced to death by the Spanish authorities at Havana may be presented and furnish the text for a reopening of a discussion of the entire Cuban situation.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Smallpox, Yellow-Fever, and Other Diseases Increasing.

Washington, May 11.—"Smallpox is steadily increasing at Santiago," according to a report to the United States Marine Hospital service, "the number of cases under treatment at the hospital reaching thirty."

"There is hardly a day that police do not discover some hidden case among the poorer classes. Yellow-fever is also increasing among the lately landed recruits, and, as the summer is approaching, the fever will take its former intensity and make fresh victims. Malarial fevers are also very common and assume the typhoid type, owing to the poisoned condition of the atmosphere we are breathing just now. Diarrhea and enterocolitis are making many victims among the children; fresh milk is almost a luxury and condensed milk does not seem in the tropics to answer the purpose for which it is put up."

BATTLE IN A CHURCH.

Faction in a Polish Congregation Attacks the Bishop.

Bay City, Mich., May 11.—Bishop Richter of Grand Rapids and Father Matkowski, pastor of St. Stanislaus' Polish church in this city, were attacked by the Father Turski faction of the congregation Sunday and badly used. Matkowski was struck several times and his cassock and surplice were torn to shreds. The bishop was kicked by an enraged Pole but not seriously injured. His robes were also torn.

St. Stanislaus' church was closed two weeks ago when the adherents of Father Turski, who has been Father Matkowski's assistant, drove the senior priest from the parish. It was believed the trouble had blown over and that the exposure of Turski's attempt to blackmail Father Matkowski had brought the members to their senses and caused them to desire the return of their old pastor, a man of great learning and high character. Bishop Richter and Father Matkowski opened the church Sunday morning and had the sexton toll the bell. The peals brought hundreds of excited Poles to the church, and they set upon bishop and priest and drove them from the building. A few of the Matkowski faction attempted to preserve the clergymen from indignity, but were overpowered. The police and sheriff's forces were called out, but were unable to quiet the mob. The church was locked and Bishop Richter and Father Matkowski escorted to a place of safety.

IN MEMORY OF A TREATY.

Emperor and Empress of Germany Join in a Celebration.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, May 11.—The celebration of the anniversary of the signing of the treaty Sunday was attended by splendid weather. Emperor William and Empress Augusta arrived in the city at 10 o'clock in the morning and received a greeting from a great multitude of people who had gathered to welcome them. LIVES OF AMERICANS
MAY YET BE SAVEDCANOVAS CABLES WEYLER TO DELAY EXECUTIONS.

Demands From Washington Will Be Considered at Madrid—Result of Trial By Court Martial in Havana Likely to Be Set Aside By Authorities.

London, May 13.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says: "Sen. Canovas del Castillo has publicly stated that America has not protested against Spain's right to punish filibusters, but only against the summary trial. American citizens are entitled to be tried in the civil courts under the treaties of 1785 and 1877. The Spanish government is willing to consider the demand, and has cabled to Captain General Weyler to delay the executions pending the result of negotiations which are actively proceeding between Washington and Madrid to define the interpretations of the aforesaid treaties.

"The Epocha (the government organ) in guarded language recommends prudence and deprecates demonstrations. It clearly intimates that the government will make another effort to conciliate President Cleveland by ordering General Weyler to send all the papers bearing upon the case here for the supreme court to pronounce upon. The execution of the sentences would thus be virtually shelved.

"The rest of the Madrid press are unanimous in the opinion that America has taken an ungenerous and unjustifiable advantage of Spain's difficulties."

A late dispatch from Havana confirms the report that Captain General Weyler has threatened to resign his post unless the sentences are executed. Several papers publish the report that besides General Weyler Generals Ochando and Ahumada, who hold important commands in Cuba, have also threatened to resign if the judgment of the court-martial is quashed.

Madrid, May 11.—There are evidences of growing popular excitement in Spain over the attitude of the United States government toward the question of the filibusters captured on board the competitor. The riots and outbreaks of popular hatred toward the United States at the time of the passage through congress of the resolutions favoring the recognition of the Cubans as belligerents have not been forgotten and the sentiments which caused them are but smoldering. The Spanish government has on all possible occasions expressed its appreciation of and satisfaction with the efforts made by the United States government to prevent as far as lay in its power the giving of unlawful aid to the Cuban insurgents by citizens of the United States, but the widespread sympathy felt for the insurgents in the United States is well recognized by the Spanish people, and the news of the expeditions from the United States landed from time to time in Cuba creates intense irritation.

The news of the capture of the men on the competitor was received with great satisfaction and rejoicing. It was felt to be the opportunity that had been offered to make an example of those who had been feeding the insurrection. The popular demand for their execution is general and is likely to become vociferous. Little account is taken of the refined questions of treaty interpretation involved in the protest of the United States government against the execution of the sentences. The action of the United States is regarded as an expression of sympathy with the insurrection, and there will be a strong popular clamor to disregard it.

The public feeling on the subject is fostered by the tenor of the advices received from Havana. Dispatches from there affirm that Capt.-Gen. Weyler is greatly irritated at the attitude of the United States on the question of the sentence. It is asserted that if the Spanish government adopts contrary view, owing to the representations made by the United States government, Capt.-Gen. Weyler will resign his post.

PRISONERS MAY BE SHOT TODAY.

Banished Correspondents Are Forced Aboard a Man-of-War.

Tampa, Fla., May 11.—James Creelman of the World and Frederick W. Lawrence of the Journal, who were recently ordered to leave Cuba by Gen. Weyler, were expected to arrive here Sunday night on the Havana steamer, but they did not arrive, and the large Cuban delegation who were at the boat to meet them were greatly disappointed.

A prominent Spanish official, who arrived last night, stated that the prisoners captured on the competitor would positively be shot to-day.

DEMAND THE DEATH SENTENCE.

Havana, May 11.—The Spanish government has been asked to approve the sentences of death passed by a court-martial upon the men captured on the competitor on a charge of piracy and rebellion.

CHICAGO WOMAN ASSAULTED.

Baltimore, Md., May 11.—Mrs. C. H. Davis, who came here from Chicago early on Saturday morning with her husband and 18-months-old baby, and, owing to the lateness of the hour, took rooms at the Hotel De Atley, near Camden station, was the victim of an attempted assault yesterday, during the temporary absence of her husband. The aggressor was William Shorter, a colored porter. Shorter was arrested and held for the action of the criminal court.

CRAVEN BEAT HIS DAUGHTER.

Bloomfield, Iowa, May 11.—D. P. Pugh of Bloomfield has been put under $1,000 bonds to appear at the term of the court to answer for an alleged brutal beating given his 16-year-old granddaughter for eating a few of his bananas. The old man was so infuriated at the girl's offense that he is alleged to have struck her over the head with a heavy cane and as she fell to have broken her arm in two places with a second blow. Considerable effort was required to save Pugh a horsewhipping at the hands of the crowd.

FAMED BLUE GRASS
ON COUNTY FARMSWISCONSIN REPRODUCES KEN-TUCKY PASTURAGE.

There is no difference between the Badger State "June Growth" and the Crop that made the Bourbon State famous—Dean Henry's Agricultural Notes.

Madison, May 11.—[Special Correspondence]—Do Wisconsin farmers realize that what they call "June grass" is Kentucky's boasted "blue grass"? When visiting Ashland, the Henry Clay home-stand, near Lexington, to study its live stock, I gave the closest attention to the sod grass of the pastures; getting down on my knees I examined the turf to compare it with that which so freely covers Wisconsin pastures and roadsides, and was not able to discover any superiority for the Kentucky product, either in density of growth or in any other way. What we call "June grass" in Wisconsin is identical, botanically, with Kentucky blue grass, and since it grows just as freely here, why should we not give it the more aristocratic name? Would not every acre of Wisconsin pasture lands be worth more in the minds of her farmers at least, and would they not take more pride in them if the carpet that covers them so green today were called Kentucky blue grass instead of plain "June grass"? Kentucky blue grass grows everywhere in our state with a freedom and tenacity which is simply surprising. It is the only grass of this region which forms a sod so dense that it can be cut and rolled up like a carpet. Even the severe draughts which sometimes afflict us cannot utterly destroy it, for though it may be brown and look entirely dead, the first good rainfall works a magical change and it greens almost in a night time, and springs forward to please the eye and nourish the cattle with a rapidity and vigor which is simply marvelous.

How Blue Grass Grows.

I wish particularly at this time to call the attention of our farmers to the peculiar habits of growth of Kentucky blue grass and draw a most important lesson therefrom. All through May and into June this grass grows rapidly and usually supplies more feed than the farmer has cattle to consume. So luxuriant is the growth that often as the farmer walks over his pastures during the last half of May he is apt to wish for more live stock to consume the over abundant forage everywhere so evident. A few weeks later, however, when he makes the same round, (for what farmer does not enjoy these frequent tours of inspection over his domain) he notes that the grass has almost ceased growing, so that by midsummer the excess of the earlier date has been cropped off and the ground shows bare and even brown. Our blue grass plants are not dead or even dying, but they have exhausted their energies and have entered a necessary period of rest, which lasts all through the latter part of July, August, and even into September.

During this period comes hard times with the cattle, for now not only are fields quite bare of provender, but the sun is almost blistering and the blood sucking insects most annoying. The sheep seek the shade, holding their noses close to earth and frequently stamping to drive away the flies and fattening cattle and young things show no increase in weight, and the dairy cows scarcely feed and much fretted shrink greatly in their milk flow. Our farmer, who only a few weeks before was wishing for more cattle to consume the extra growth of grass, now wishes he had larger areas of pasture and regretfully realizes that he is losing money every day because his stock are not properly fed. Along in September with the cooler weather and increased rainfall the blue grass fields show their rich green again, the food becomes more abundant and normal conditions once more prevail.

Should Provide Forage.

While every farmer has each year observed just what is above described, too few of them provide for the deficiency as they should. We have all come to think that after we have fed our stock for six months in winter, they should at least shift for themselves the other half of the year. Is it profitable to let farm stock go hungry at any time, and why should cattle suffer for food in summer any more than in winter? I urge upon every farmer reader of these notes to at once make ample provision against the shortage above described by supplying some kind of forage easily raised.

which provides green food for spring use, and is already large enough for cutting at this time. Next to comes the oat plant, which if cut just before heading or shortly after, gives valuable forage. By June red clover is large enough to cut for soilings, cattle and furnishes excellent food. These plants usually come, however, before the blue grass pastures have given out and so are not particularly needed by farmers who have the usual area of pasture land. A great plant for helping over midsummer shortings is Indian corn, and I wish particularly to call attention at this time to its great merits. Every farmer who wishes to get the most from his stock should plant one acre of early Minnesota sweet corn or some other early variety for each ten acres or their equal of stock on his farm. This corn will be ready for feeding early in August. Another acre of Stowell's evergreen sweet corn or some good variety of field corn should be planted for every ten head of stock to be fed after that first planted has been used up. Plant this corn in some field convenient to the stable or to the pasture where it may be spread out on the sod for feeding. A load should be drawn each day, and as much given to the cattle as they will consume without waste.

Value of Forage Corn.

If some stranger should come to Wisconsin and offer our farmers a means of paying all their state taxes without trouble to them, he would be considered a great benefactor. Let them know that if they will provide forage corn in the way described above for their stock, they will save more than their taxes in preventing a great shrinking in milk flow and in failure to gain flesh, which comes to all our stock in midsummer. The aggregate loss of Wisconsin's creameries and cheese factories through this midsummer shrinkage amounts to one or two million dollars each year, a large part of which may be saved by a little foresight and proper preparation.

It is now time to plant corn in the southern part of our state for the purpose above described. Let us expect the blue grass of our pastures to furnish a constant and proper supply of forage for our cattle during the whole summer season, but prepare to make up the shortage which will surely come, by having on hand a goodly supply of green fodder corn. The farmer who cannot secure the seed of sweet corn need not be discouraged, but will be greatly pleased with any variety of early growing field corn. It is not so much a matter of variety as that of having a liberal supply of some kind of food when needed.—W. A. HENRY, Dean of Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

NOW AT AN ENDFINAL SUNDAY MEETING HELD AT CLINTON.

Evangelist Burnell will complete the Four Weeks' Visitation on Friday—Big Audiences Have Been Present—Nine Hundred Visits Made—What Was Said in Local Churches.

With an enthusiastic meeting held at Clinton yesterday, the Sunday work of the campaign in Rock County came to a close. Evangelist Burnell will devote his time, until Friday, to visiting Clinton homes, and on that day his work will end until next October, when he is expected to return.

"This campaign" said President Wright to a Gazette man, "has been the most successful ever executed by the Rock County Sunday School Association."

The meeting at Clinton was held in the Baptist church. Large delegations from the vicinity of the village were present and the building was filled to overflowing.

The audiences that have listened to Mr. Burnell in the four weeks' work, aggregate five thousand people, and nine hundred visits have been made. Mr. Burnell expects to make three hundred visits in Clinton, which will swell the total to twelve hundred. This is Mr. Burnell's personal work, and besides that he has gotten others to assist him.

On his return next fall the annual county meeting will probably be held at Janesville or Beloit.

MERRY HEART IS GOOD MEDICINE

Rev. V. E. Southworth of All Souls Talks of Popular Amusements

At All Souls Mr. Southworth took for his text yesterday morning "A merry heart is a good medicine." He said, "I believe the old Hebrew maxim is strictly accurate. Cheerfulness and brightness of the proper kind and quantity would put an end to nine-tenths of our sickness, nine-tenths of our insanity and nine-tenths of our crime. Cheerfulness is divine factor in human life and ought to be conscientiously cultivated. If I could have my way, I would have this church the most cheerful bright and joyous place in the city. I would make it impossible for people not to be good natured here. A properly conducted church could take under its constant supervision every form of legitimate entertainment. What now are instruments of evil in evil hands, may be made instruments of good in good hands. What now are used to what the appetite for worse things, might be used to what the appetite for better things. The evils of the popular sports consist in the influence by which they are usually surrounded and the spirit in which they are usually indulged in. Change these influences, make them of the best instead of the worst, elevate the spirit until it shall be pure where it is now impure. Take the billiard table, the bowling alley, the cards, the song and dance, the theatrical entertainment and place them in the hands of a church. Throw around them the greatest possible cleanliness and manliness, let them be used to start men towards the right as they have so long been used to start men toward the wrong."

Whatever danger there is in the card table and billiard table is vastly multiplied by learning them in the saloons and sporting dens and it could be vastly diminished by bringing them under the uplifting influence of a true church.

Whatever is human ought not to be foreign to the church. The church ought to be a place where everything that is best in a man could grow and ripen naturally. All-sound men need an all-sound church. Pinched, stunted, one-sided men are largely the result of pinched, stunted, one-sided churches. We must understand human nature, and adopt our methods to its many-sided needs and modes. We should use as much business sagacity and earnestness in soliciting the patronage of those we want to help, as the saloon is wont to use in soliciting the patronage of those he is almost sure to injure.

Succes in church work would mean the largest possible benefit to the greatest number of people. It would mean men made manly, women made womanly, and all made friendly. It would mean the strong at work for the weak; the rich at work for the poor; the well-educated at work for the uneducated; the happy at work for the sad; the virtuous at work for the vicious. It would mean gladness and joy in all hearts; it would mean bright faces—"smiles that have no cruelty," words that have no sting or insincerity; it would mean "a good diffused and in diffusion ever more intense; it would mean "thoughts that pierce the night like stars, and by their mild persistence urge man's search to vaster issues;" it would mean an active devotion of all who love in the interest of all who suffer; it would mean anything and everything that would add to "the gladness of the world."

"So many Gods, so many creeds, so many oaths that wind and wind, While just the art of being kind Is all the sad world needs."

FIRST CENTURY RUN OF THE SEASON

ORION SUTHERLAND AND J. G. DELONG MADE IT.

Covered the Necessary One Hundred Miles in Nine Hours and Twenty-five Minutes Actual Riding Time—The Trips Taken By Local Wheelmen—Cycling Gossip.

The first century run of the season was made by Ex-Alderman Orion Sutherland and J. G. DeLong. They left the city at 4:30 o'clock a. m. and arrived at Oconomowoc at 8:45. After a two hours' rest they returned to Whitewater for dinner, arriving home at 5:30 p. m. Their actual riding time for the hundred miles was nine hours and twenty-five minutes. The wind on the return trip was blowing a regular gale, or they would have made better time. It seems to be easy enough for these two riders to make a hundred miles' run. They have planned on a number of trips this summer including visits to Kenosha, Racine, Chicago, Milwaukee and other Wisconsin points.

New Rule at Fair Grounds.

A new rule goes into effect at the fair grounds this week and no bicycle riders will be allowed on the race track before 5 o'clock. It was the intention of the association to rule the bicycle from the track at all times, because it interfered much with the training of horses, but instead riders will be welcomed at all times after 5 o'clock and no charge will be made, a privilege for which the boys may thank Joe Held.

MEN WITH GRIEVANCES.

The Madison Democrat says of the State Journal's attack on Governor Upham:

"Uncle Hod" is evidently scared at the hopeless state of his insurrection, when it accuses The Democrat of sympathy with Governor Upham because it tells the facts. The cold, clammy truth is that every active enemy of the governor is a man with a grievance, a man with hurt self-love, a man whose application for place has been rejected or whose desires have been thwarted in some way, or a man influenced by those who feel these ignoble sentiments."

The Manitowoc Pilot, another democratic paper that is not afraid to speak the truth says: There is one criticism offered upon Governor Upham's official conduct, among the many which have force, that should not count against him, and that is signing the bill relieving the state treasurers from the judgment rendered against them by the courts of the state. Upham should not have accepted the nomination on any platform which declared against relieving the treasurers of a burden imposed by law though repugnant to every feeling of justice. The men who aided in carrying out this measure of relief deserve credit for their charitable action. It is far better that party pledges be broken than that individuals be impoverished to enrich the state.

"If Upham be discarded for an act of humanity he will bear with him the sympathy and respect of all those who think charitable action no offense against society."

THE LAST WORD.

Indiana and Illinois settled the republican presidential question. Indiana's was the final and deciding vote. It is fitting that this should be so. Ever since Harrison withdrew from the race a few months ago Indiana's preference has been unmistakably for McKinley.

The state would have been put in a false position had its delegates been given into the hands of Platt, Quay and the other anti-McKinley bosses. Harrison hardly would have been the choice of the united anti-McKinley forces in any event.

Most of the bosses who are now fighting the Ohio man were very actively and ardently opposing the Indianian four years ago. Platt and Quay were giving out forecasts at this time in 1892 showing that Harrison would not have a third of the votes of the Minneapolis convention. Blaine or somebody else, if their predictions were true, was absolutely sure to carry off the candidacy. There is no good reason to suppose that the bosses who are the head and the front of all the opposition there is to McKinley, hate Harrison less in 1896 than they did in 1892.

Mrs. Leonard on Trial for Murder.
Wichita, Kan., May 11.—Mrs. Irene Leonard is being tried for the second time for the murder of her husband, H. M. Leonard. The killing took place in this city on the night of Nov. 17, and Mrs. Leonard, her divorced husband, F. M. Williamson, and their son, Norville Williamson, were arrested for the crime. Williamson was tried and acquitted. The jury in Mrs. Leonard's first trial disagreed. The son's case has not yet come up. Leonard is presumed to have been killed while in bed in his own home, his body then dressed and carried into the alley back of the barn. He carried a $5,000 insurance policy in favor of his wife. It was brought out in the evidence at the former trials that Mrs. Leonard and her divorced husband were seen out riding the day previous to the killing and that Williamson was reading Leonard's insurance policy.

Throws Up a Lizard.

Trenton, N. J., May 11.—Miss Emma Large of West Hanover street, who has been prominent socially, has been sinking slowly but steadily through the effects of an unknown sickness for about two months. A week ago a new physician was called and after trying other devices to restore health caused extreme nausea. During one of these periods she expelled a lizard an inch and a half long. She is now recovering.

Scorching Is Prohibited.
Webster City, Iowa, May 11.—The city council has just passed an ordinance doing away with scorching on the public streets and compelling bicycle riders to use a lamp at night. Last night, to show the disapproval of the ordinance, 100 riders formed in line, and amid the rattling of all kinds of bells and the blowing of tin horns and whistles, paraded the streets until after midnight. There is a strong probability that the council will pass another ordinance keeping bicycles off the streets altogether as the result of last night's demonstration.

JAY JONES IS FREED BY JUDGE BENNETT

CLINTON MAN IS NOT GUILTY OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

Court Held That He Was a Joint Owner of the Fund That He Collected As He Was to Be Paid Therefrom—Ennis' Bail Forfeited.

Jay Jones of Clinton, is a free man. Mr. Jones, who, as it was alleged, led the choir, played the organ, and was the managing editor of a Sunday school for nine years before he got his name printed in the criminal calendar of the circuit court for Rock county, was charged with embezzlement.

The complaining witness was one Olaf Johnson, a farm hand. He claimed that he gave Jones a note for some twenty dollars to collect, and that Jones did not pay him the money. Jones' arrest followed, and he was brought before Judge Phelps in the municipal court. His attorney, J. L. Mahoney, asked for his discharge, on the ground that as Jones was to get his pay out of the funds collected, he was therefore a joint owner of the fund, and could not be guilty of embezzlement.

Judge Phelps Refused to Do So

Judge Phelps, of the municipal court, refused to grant this motion. Jones then took a change of venue to the circuit court, and when the criminal calendar was called, the case was set for today. Attorney Mahoney at once moved for the dismissal of Jones on the ground above stated, and Judge Bennett granted the motion. The information against Jones was then quashed and he walked out of court a free man. The transaction occurred about a year and a half ago.

John Ennis, who was indicted for selling liquor illegally at Orfordville, by the grand jury, failed to appear when the case against him was called this morning, and District Attorney Jackson had his bond declared forfeited. The sureties were James Ennis and D. Ennis.

The case of the state against Patrick Dorsey will come before Judge Phelps tomorrow. Dorsey is charged with burglary in robbing A. J. Ingoldsby's residence of silverware.

HOW TO MAKE SHADE TREES GROW

Charles T. Wilcox Tells of The Proper Mode of Procedure.

"Hundreds of fine trees in Janesville die because they are not properly attended to when they are set out" said Charles T. Wilcox in talking to a Gazette man today. "People set them out leaving the top on after the are cut off. This is wrong. When they cut off the roots they should also cut off the tops. Then if nature can spare any sap after developing the trunk, the top will begin to grow out. If all the sap is needed to keep the trunk alive, then none will be wasted to sustain the top, and the leaves will appear after the body of the tree develops. Prune the top off as bare as a walking stick and the tree will live; leave the top on and the tree will die. Another thing. Trees should not be trimmed except in May and June. Cutting them in the fall gives no time for the wound to heal."

As Mr. Wilcox has had wide experience in the raising of trees, his advice is valuable.

NAMES OF THE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATING CLASS.

ROLL Contains the Largest Number Ever Sent Out of the Janesville Schools—Twenty-two Young Men and Thirty-seven Young Ladies Listed.

The largest class that ever graduated from a Janesville school will get diplomas next June—thirty-seven young ladies and twenty-two young men. This is not only the largest class, but the per cent of the male members is also the largest by far that ever left a Janesville school.

This particular fact causes more favorable comment than any other as the question "how to keep the boys in school" has always been a serious one for the management. This large number of graduates contrasts sharply with the class of '90 when only nine young ladies received diplomas and the number of young men was still fewer. These figures tell more forcibly than words what great strides the schools have taken since then.

The graduating exercises will take place in the opera house, the second week of June and the following is a list of those who expect to graduate:

THE BEAUTY PATCH.

hyacinths and violets burst furiously upon the air.

Did he know Alicia's disguise, I wondered, and then for a moment I cursed my own stupidity. How should I know her in that passing throng? The starry eyes would, beyond all doubt be veiled, and the silvery voice would hardly reach my ear in such a babel of confusion.

I turned and scanned my brother's poor disguise, hoping I knew not why, for something that would aid me in my dire dilemma. Another instant and my heart grew light. Fernando turned, and my eye caught instantly a golden gleam, the glitter of a shining star, pinned directly above his heart.

"So that is your private badge of recognition," I muttered bitterly, and then began to scan more closely than ever the occupants of the gorgeous carriages.

At last she came drawn by, four-miles white, prancing steeds, whose necks were hung with crimson roses, and then for the first time I discerned that my brother held a monstrous bunch of the same rare, fragrant blossoms.

Curiously, eagerly, the starry eyes, behind a snow-white veil, searched everywhere the teeming balconies, and at last, just as she reached his seat, Fernando rose, and bending toward her displayed his golden bau-

He bent and dropped the ruby cluster directly at her feet and a rush of feeling seemed to overpower her, for, forgetful of both time and scene, she touched her fingers to her lips and wafted a kiss directly to the giver.

"Coward!" I hissed, "to steal a woman's love!" And then, as the man, half puzzled at my words, turned suddenly and took one step my way, I rose, and, throwing my roses in his face, sprang like a tiger at his breast and stabbed him to the heart exactly over the spot so lately shielded by the golden bau-

There was a shout from the street, so fierce, so loud, so long, that for an instant everything was still, but when I crept unhindered from the spot only a second later, the battle had begun again and the tragedy of love and rage was over and forgotten.

Why I was not stopped I do not know, unless it was that some had seen the dagger and believed the whole thing to be a farce to add excitement to their pleasure. However it was I eluded them all and quickly undoing my disguise, left it to be trampled with the flowers while I hurried away from the sweet confusion.

Turning my back upon the city I went my way until on the following day I found myself mounting the marble steps that led to the gambling den at Monte Carlo. Half way up the stairs, with the memory of my evil deed still burning in my brain, I stopped suddenly, chilled to the very marrow, for just before me, noble, handsome as of old, I beheld my brother Fernando.

"My God!" I shouted hoarsely. "What have I done! What have I done!"

Fernando quickly descended the steps and stood beside me: "Have you been losing, Pedro?" he said kindly. "If so take this," and he held a handful of gold before me, while I stared in stupid horror.

"When—when did you come here?" I asked him wildly, and for answer Fernando took me by the arm and led me slowly away.

"You are my brother, Pedro, and I will tell you all," he said in a strangely mournful tone. "You see, I was fool enough to fall in love and the lady's—Alicia's husband has returned," he finished sadly.

I caught my breath with a stifling gasp. "Does this man, Alicia's husband, resemble you?" I asked in horror.

"In form, yes, in face, no," he replied briefly.

With a sudden sob of weakness I told him the awful story, and Fernando, noble Fernando, only took me by the hand and said compassionately:

"Yours has been a hard lot, Pedro. Deformed and hideous from your birth, but let us not add more of wickedness to crime. Leave this cursed spot and go you quietly to Paris and await me there. It is just possible that you did not kill the man, and as no one suspects you now you can safely trust it all to me."

I went to Paris and waited. After a week, my brother, handsomer, nobler than ever, but with a plaintive sadness in his tones, brought me the following information: "No one suspects you and the man is yet alive. There was a badge of some kind pinned above his heart that turned the dagger's edge, but—" he continued sadly, "he had better have died at once, for this sin of yours has brought about his capture, and Alicia will lose her husband soon, either behind the prison walls or by the stroke of la guillotine."

Thoroughly subdued and in misery of spirit, I returned to Nice. The streets seemed deserted in the silence following the carnival, and it was only when an execution was announced that there was any show of excitement among the weary people. Again the streets were thronged, but I did not venture out. Fernando brought me the news as I laid, trembling and conscience stricken, in my bed, and when I learned that Alicia, the beautiful, starry-eyed Alicia, was widowed by my hand, I wept such tears of agony that my brother was gravely startled.

I am failing rapidly, the physicians say, but my secret is safe with my brother. It is nearly a year since the carnival and now Fernando has a secret of his own, one that he gladly lets me share, for he knows that sorrow and remorse have shriven my soul of guilty deeds and filled my heart with penitence.

He cast a furtive glance into the mirror. No; there was nothing to affright one in the image he saw reflected there. Nevertheless, he pro-

His eyes were dark and deeply set,

and his face expressed the solitary,

the misanthrope; but his downy cheeks would flush at any innocent jest, revealing in his smile small white teeth.

He had been destined for the priest hood, and had lately come from the college of the Jesuits with his head filled with scholastic and theological teachings. He was awkward, timid, embarrassed, inexpert in music and dancing, unable to make a bow, but with a fresh voice and the face of a cherub. He sang only in chorus, never looked at himself in a large mirror, and his sole suit was one of black cloth. Nightly vigils had given him a resemblance to a half-open rosebud ready to bloom.

Their parents, in their wisdom, had decided to unite these two young per sons, and at the moment this narrative opens the old marquis was giving a severe reproof to his son because he displayed so little eagerness in carry ing out his desires.

"Think, young sir, that upon you rests the continuance of our race. Put away this melancholy air. Remember you are a man who, as equal to the king, should not tremble before a sword, a drinking bout, or a petti coat."

"Oh, signor!" cried the youth.

"What is it? You blush like a cher in your seminary! Can you handle a sword?"

"No, no, signor."

"Why so much praying there?"

"Because my confessor bade me re

the devil would carry me to perdition, and I wish to be saved and not go to that unpleasant place."

"Tut, tut, tut! First of all, please me by doing what I wish. To you I give a betrothed worthy of you by her birth, by her youth, by her intelli

you want?"

"My wants are much less, signor, if you will pardon my saying so."

"Imbecile! My word and honor are at stake. Think of the dignity con

Be quick, my son."

Jasmin combed and curled his young master's hair, substituted for the heavy shoes he had worn a pair of tight slippers with silver buckles and put upon him the usual white lawn shirt adorned with lace.

Silvandro endured this change with a sufficiently good grace, but the idea of exposing himself to view as the suitor of a girl he had never seen caused him to feel indignant.

When alone, he cast his eyes over his person, resplendent with well that sparkled with silvery luster. His aspect was greatly improved. But he would not be overcome by vanity and, resisting the influence of the the joy which his fine appearance aroused in him.

DEADLOCKS IN 3 COUNTRIES.

France, England and the United States Experience These Stumbling-Blocks.

The situation in Washington just now calls to mind the legislative deadlock in England during the last parliament, when the house of commons sent up measure after measure, only to be met by the hopelessly large tory opposition, in the house of lords, says the Review of Reviews. Affairs have now reached the pass in England where the liberal party can never hope to enact an important law except by means of threats which would make the house of lords feel its own existence to be in danger. At the moment when these words are written the long-growing divergence of sentiment between the French senate and chamber of deputies has resulted in a very critical and stubborn locking of horns. In France the senate represents moderate republicanism of the steady, conservative sort. The chamber of deputies has been growing even more radical and socialistic, until at length a radical majority has found its way to the front in a radical cabinet under Prime Minister Bourgeois. This cabinet has taken a kind of action respecting the investigation of the southern railway scandals that meets with the disapproval of the senate. Repeated votes have shown the senate's lack of confidence in the ministry. In accordance with the theory of the French government, and in accordance with all former precedents, the cabinet should have resigned. But, inasmuch as the chamber of deputies has voted as strongly in favor of the Bourgeois policy as the senate has voted against it, Premier Bourgeois informs President Faure that he is satisfied with the approval of the deputies and proposes to ignore the senate. The situation is the most peculiar and in some regards the most dangerous one that has arisen in the practical working of the French constitution since the present republic was founded a quarter of a century ago. Thus everything in the nature of a serious legislative and political strait that has occurred in the three great constitutional governments of England, France and the United States within the past year or two has grown chiefly out of the wide difference of character and sentiment between the two halves of a bicameral legislative system. In England the one real question of internal constitutional reform, upon which all other reforms must wait, is that of a complete recasting of the house of lords. In France and the United States the principal remedy for the present strains and deadlocks must be found in the better education of public opinion.

SAVED BY A LIFE-CHAIN

Connecticut Lad's Rescue a Companion by Novel Means.

There is a newly made hero down in the little post village of Sandy Hook, Conn., says the New York World. He is Stephen Keane, a bright lad of 15 years. Stephen has been a valorous boy all his life but it was not until last Monday that he became a real hero.

He and a party of his classmates from St. Michael's parochial school at Sandy Hook on that day went skating on Niantic millpond. In the party was Michael Keating, a boy of 12 years. Michael, venturing where the ice was thin, broke through and fell into the water. Stephen Keane cried:

"Form a 'life chain,' boys, and we'll save little Mike easy!"

Lying flat, face downward, on the ice, he directed one of the boys to lie down as he had and hold tightly on to his ankles. The ankles of this one were in turn grasped by another lad, and so on until a "life chain" of six brave boys was formed.

Keane wriggled his way carefully out on the thin ice. Before him was poor Keating struggling for life. Once he went down and still the first link of the "life chain" was crawling slowly on the ice far away. Down he went a second time.

"Hold tight, boys!" cried Keane.

Just as the drowning boy was despairing for the last time Keane seized his coat.

Crack went the ice and the first two links of the "life chain" were also in the icy water.

Finally all the boys were dragged out, the worse only for a wetting.

When the crowd gathered around young Keane and showered praises on him for his forethought and pluck he only said:

"I read in a newspaper how to do the trick and I thought I'd try it."

Schrader Going too Fast.

August Schrader, the alleged divine healer about whom our readers already know, was arrested in Newport, Ky., after being driven out of Cincinnati. The charge was disorderly conduct. It is stated by one who has investigated the subject that the average yearly expenses of a co-operative building and loan association of Philadelphia is $350. "What I like about your writings," said the thoughtful editor to the young man in the tight-fitting coat, "is their resemblance to Emerson's."

"Is that so?" cried the delighted young man, clasping his hands together.

The editor nodded.

"May I—er—ask," timidly ventured the young man, "wherein your discernment and critical judgment discover this—er—resemblance?" And the young man blushed again.

Once more the thoughtful editor nodded.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes appetite, helps digestion, promotes assimilation, fills out the hollows in cheeks and neck with good solid flesh and brings back the gaudy glow of girlhood. With these remedies there is no need of detected "examinations."

Attempts to Assault Children.
Princeton, Ind., May 12.—Sunday while Mrs. Robert Little, residing just east of this city, was attending a funeral, a person who looked like a tramp, but who claims to be a preacher and a faith doctor, entered her home and attempted to assault Eunice, an 11-year-old daughter, but was prevented by her cries that attracted the attention of persons who were passing. He made his escape and further up the road grabbed another little girl. A general alarm was given and several persons traced him to a school house some eight miles from here, where he was captured. He is now in jail. He refused to give his name.

Millais Suffers with Cancer.
London, May 10.—Sir John Millais, president of the Royal Academy, is reported to be suffering from cancer of the throat, and surgeons were summoned to attend him on Saturday at midnight. They immediately operated upon the distinguished patient and the alarming symptoms in his case were much relieved.

Young mothers dread the summer months on account of the great mortality among children, caused by bowel troubles. Perfect safety may be assured those who keep on hand Dr. Witt's Colic and Cholera Cure, and administer it promptly. For cramps, bilious colic, dysentery and diarrhoea, it affords instant relief. C. D. Stevens.

The Beaten Path

is easy to follow, although in some instances it costs much more to keep in it, than it would to get out.

There are men, sound sensible citizens, who learned the way in youth to a custom tailor's shop and they'll keep traveling the expensive path until, by accident, some day they drop in here and "look at kind of ready-to-wear clothes. Then if they are not totally blinded by prejudice they'll be converted to the new doctrine of perfect fitting clothes at prices that would make their tailors wince.
